BREAKTHROUGH

BREAKTHROUGH is a 118.8-metre superyacht by Feadship, created as one of the most technologically significant projects in the modern yacht industry. She is the world's first hydrogen fuel-cell superyacht and the largest motor yacht ever launched in the Netherlands.

The project is built around a move away from diesel-based energy. Her system uses 16 PowerCell hydrogen fuel-cell units producing a combined 3 MW of clean electrical power, with water vapour as the only by-product. This allows the yacht to supply onboard systems without emissions, remain silently at anchor for up to a week, and cruise through protected marine zones at 10 knots without using fossil fuel.

Connection with the sea is achieved through a record number of opening hull elements for Feadship: 14 balconies, 7 large platforms, and 9 shell doors. The balconies extend from the hull at the touch of a button, becoming natural continuations of the interior spaces and creating private terraces close to the water.

Both exterior and interior design were developed by RWD. Across seven decks, the design uses light tones, travertine, rattan, eucalyptus, and oak. Soft lines, circular forms, and concealed lighting create a calm, warm, and contemporary atmosphere without excessive visual display.

One of the yacht's most unusual spaces is the underwater lounge, integrated into the keel below the beach club. It features six large windows made from 7 cm thick double-layer glass, offering direct views into the ocean. Above it are the beach club, spa area, steam room, sauna with plunge pools, beauty salon, and a 12-seat Dolby Atmos cinema.

Overall, BREAKTHROUGH represents an important milestone in the evolution of large yachts. Hydrogen fuel cells, silent electric propulsion, extensive waterside terraces, an underwater lounge, and a calm RWD interior come together to define a new-generation yacht: quieter, cleaner, and m...
